Is this the Apple Watch 2? New rumours are claiming Apple could be about to reveal the next generation of its wearable technology. The company recently announced the Apple Watch 2, a new model, but a new report from DIGITIMES suggests the next generation device could be about to be announced at an event in October. "The Apple Watch 2 will likely enter mass production in September and be released in the fourth quarter," the source said. This is according to Apple analyst Ming-Chi Kuo of KGI Securities, who predicted the Apple Watch 2 will arrive in September before the new year. And Digitimes says that this new model could come with a new design and higher-resolution screen and might also be waterproof. It could also feature improved heart rate monitoring, more health-related apps and a faster processor. But a major question is what will the Apple Watch 2 feature that the Apple Watch doesn't have? "We are not sure what the Apple Watch 2 will add as there is no new function not included in the Apple Watch," said the report. "We are also not sure if the Watch 2 will come with an additional Apple logo." But we do know that the Apple Watch is almost a year old, so surely the firm has something more to offer. And if Digitimes is right about the September date, then we'll be able to find out for sure in just a few weeks. A: The TextFieldValidator is designed to handle arrays or collections of fields, as long as you use the correct field separator and allow for empty fields. It can also handle null values and so on. Here is an example of how to use it: Dim value as String value = "true" or any other true value value = Array(True, False, False, False, False, False, False, False, True) or any other series of true values ' or with a comma-separated values file. value = ReadText("values.txt") we won't check this file for nulls, empty fields, etc. Dim Validator As New TextFieldValidator With Validator.AllowNull = True .AllowEmptyField = True .AllowBlank = True .CheckForNullValues = False .ValidatorType = TextFieldValidator.ValidateAllFields .CheckForEmptyFields = False .UseFieldNames = True .UseUniqueFieldNames = False End With Dim result As Boolean = Validator.Check(value) The problem with the array approach is that you need to know all of the fields and their names ahead of time. For a CSV file, that is a problem, but you could still use the array approach with a little extra work. The stakes are high for the movie "Obvious Child," starring Jenny Slate, Laura Dern, and Bill Hader. The film, which premiered at Sundance in 2013, is currently receiving limited distribution.
