Client for Streaming PRO is a simple utility that can get to introduce you to your future audience. It's a lightweight application that can be used both for beginners and professionals alike. Clean, easy-to-use interface For those who already know what streaming is about, getting around this application will be a walk in the park. Newcomers on the other side will need a bit of time to learn it. Still, the learning process should be swift, no matter your lack of experience. Just take a good look at the buttons and labels, and you'll notice how intuitive the app is. For those who need help, the developer's home page provides a small guide on how to get set up. Getting started The most important aspect with Client for Streaming PRO is to get the video source right. That can be done by clicking the + button from the Source pane. A collapsible list will be revealed, allowing you to select the streaming material. That can be a game, active window, image, text media source, webcam, browser, and more. Once the source is selected, the black preview screen will display it. Don't worry about the sound setup, the app will automatically detect your headphones and microphone. Next in line is the streaming service, which you can find by going to Settings > Stream >Service. Among the supported platforms, you can find popular ones like Twitch, YouTube Gaming, Mixer, etc. Furthermore, you can create scenes short clips that can be triggered at any time for comedic purposes or reactions. Going live Once you've ensured all settings are in place, you can start the stream. Do that by clicking the Start Broadcast button. To keep an eye on your machine's pulse, the app will display the processor's load. If the CPU is under too much stress, your frames will be affected, slowing down your stream. Of course, this issue can be avoided by having a medium to high-end rig. All in all, Client for Streaming PRO might not be a unique tool, but it's functional and extremely easy-to-comprehend. Perfect for users who wish to take off as streamers or for established streamers looking to change their software. Regardless, rookie or pro, this tool will serve both. More information about the ImageTrezor project Homepage: Faster and more secure, a Bitmain-developed version of Cryptonight, which is the most secure mining algorithm for ethereum is soon to hit the market. Sucuri Labs spotted a new file on GitHub containing the source code, we were able to analyze it, and we believe that it is indeed a Cryptonight2 miner. Technical details Cryptonight2 differs from the original version of Cryptonight in many aspects: it has a minor codebase, it uses a different Cryptonight algorithm and is compatible with smaller Bitcoin ASICs. It is also very secure due to its 8-rounds to 8-rounds time-memory trade-off, which will be explained further in the article. The miner uses the same mining algorithm as Monero, which makes it compatible with other cryptonight implementations like Zcash and Darkcoin, which means that the miner could potentially be used on those cryptocurrencies as well. With Cryptonight2, Bitmain seems to have made a change in how the mining process works.
