1. Field of the Invention The present invention is a computer input device that is used for entering data into and controlling an image forming apparatus. 2. Description of the Related Art It is important to coordinate the function of input means and the function of the image forming apparatus in order to optimize the automatic functions of the image forming apparatus. FIG. 7 illustrates a conventional technique disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,883,936. In FIG. 7, a portable information terminal device 14 is connected to an image forming apparatus 10 via a universal serial bus (USB) bus connector 16. The image forming apparatus 10 is connected to a host computer (hereinafter referred to as the "host") for performing information input (writing) operation using the portable information terminal device 14. In this construction, the data transfer between the portable information terminal device 14 and the image forming apparatus 10 is performed via a built-in connector interface (an interface having a built-in USB port). A group of interface connectors are provided on a surface of the portable information terminal device 14. One of these interface connectors is used for the connection with the image forming apparatus. Therefore, the function of the image forming apparatus can be controlled by the portable information terminal device 14, such as activation, functional manipulation, and printing, via the interface connector. When the image forming apparatus 10 is not connected to the interface connector, the presence of the interface connector can be detected by detecting whether or not data can be transferred to the image forming apparatus 10. In addition, when the image forming apparatus 10 is connected to the interface connector, the data transfer between the portable information terminal device 14 and the image forming apparatus 10 is performed via the USB connector 16. Therefore, when there is no USB connector in the image forming apparatus 10, data can be transferred to the image forming apparatus 10 via the USB connector 16. In addition, when the USB connector 16 is connected to the interface connector, data can be transferred to the interface connector in the image forming apparatus 10. Thus, information relating to the function of the image forming apparatus 10 can be obtained from the portable information terminal device 14. To sum up, in the above-described conventional technique, information relating to the function of the image forming apparatus 10 can be obtained from the portable information terminal device 14 by detecting whether or not the interface connector is connected to the image forming apparatus 10, or whether or not the USB connector is connected to the image forming apparatus 10.
