AC Auto Clicker [Mac/Win] (Final 2022)

AUTOCLICKER is a small application that allows you to click automatically a number of times at a set time interval, once you have started the program. For example, you can click in a Web browser when a site has changed (press Ctrl+L), or you can click several times (double click) in a graphic application to change the color of pixels. You can also choose to click a single-point or a double-click button and to start the clicking from the current position, either on the mouse cursor or a certain point. The application has 2 ways to specify the task parameters: - The Auto clicker parameters: in this case, you can select the interval of time in which the task will be repeated. You can also specify to start the click at the mouse cursor or a certain point. - Program settings: here you can enter the starting and stopping time, if you click in a single point or a double click button. You can choose to click the left or right mouse button (or both) or set a custom hotkey to start or to stop the automatic clicking at any time.
