Wikipedia People who edit Wikipedia are called Wikipedia editors. All Wikipedia editors are volunteers. The Wikimedia Foundation, which owns Wikipedia, is a non-profit organization whose mission is to empower people to learn, connect, and share with each other to improve access to knowledge. The foundation also runs Wikipedia Zero, a free mobile app that uses Wikipedia to give users free wireless access to Wikipedia. Wikipedia Ever see the movie Phone Booth? It's about a guy who is about to be killed when he happens to get a call from his ex-girlfriend. When the killer finds out he's being called, he snatches the phone and hangs up. The killer is fatally wounded and this phone booth becomes the last safe place for the killer to call his ex-girlfriend and tell her he loves her. The killer then passes away in the phone booth. Wikipedia has something like that in its design - it is a digital safe phone booth. If you are a Wikipedia editor, you can anonymously contact other editors, read email messages, and write articles about many topics, provided that you are in the right section of Wikipedia. Wikipedia What was the first computer you ever used? You can use the power of the Internet to answer this question. All you need is a computer with Internet access, the URL for a home page of a museum that has a collection of antique or vintage computers, and your email address. First, sign up for a free account at the website of the museum, like this. Log in to your account at the museum's website, and click this link to see all the computers the museum owns. After the page displays all of the available computers, you can decide which one looks the most interesting to you. You can make an anonymous inquiry about any of the items on this page, and sometimes you will be connected with an employee of the museum. For example, in January, I got a response from a museum employee who asked me to do a report about the Apple II computers that the museum owns.
