Once the installation process.Radio Local council votes for strike action in united Ireland debate UPDATED Plans for a referendum on ending the Union have been dismissed as 'unconstitutional' by the government. Those intending to vote Yes this Thursday have been warned they will be breaking the law if they do. The Pro-Union group is now holding a meeting at the School of Irish Studies in Belfast on Saturday afternoon. The unionist group, Leave Ulster Together, is holding its own meeting in the same location this morning. Speaking at the meeting attended by less than 300 people, No2NI Sinn Fein says that while the position of the other parties on the issue is clear, there are differences of opinion over whether a referendum is the way forward. He said that it is not just the Northern Ireland Executive that is considering the issue, as the Irish government and the Irish national government are also considering the same issue. Speaking earlier, the deputy first minister said that No2NI are an 'unlawful group' campaigning on a Yes vote. He said that when they say that they want a referendum on the Irish question, it is'simply not true'. 'It is a political move by Sinn Fein and others to deny a unionist majority in this community. 'It has no basis in fact or in the reality of the situation in Northern Ireland. It has no prospect of success and it is politically motivated. 'This group has been formed for its

I have a csv file with column of numbers separated by commas (I'm reading this file using java, not through the command line) and I want to read one of the columns, which has a decimal representation (or a "real" representation, numbers that are not in a decimal representation). I'm going to read that column using: String delimiter = ","; String data = "1.23"; try{ Scanner s = new Scanner(new File("myFile.csv")); s.useDelimiter(delimiter); while(s.hasNext()){ String read = s.next(); System.out.println(read); } } catch(Exception e) { } The problem is that when I print read out it's always a number: 1.2 I know that the value comes from the
