Iran's foreign minister said he had visited war-ravaged Yemen as part of efforts by Tehran to help the Arab world deal with the coronavirus pandemic. Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif posted a picture of himself on social media on Thursday, saying the visit to the Houthi-controlled capital Sanaa, with its tall buildings and narrow alleyways, was an "eye-opener". "We are sending the Shiite Yemeni people and all Muslims health care aid in medicine, food and other equipment," he added, announcing plans to deliver 30 million masks, more than 10 million patient beds and thousands of decontamination devices. Yemen has become a major battleground in the Syrian war after Houthi fighters captured much of the country, triggering a Saudi-led coalition air campaign that has driven the Iran-allied Houthis out of several towns.

Thrombosis in children with venous or arterial thrombosis. This study compares the incidence of abnormal tests of thrombophilia and prevalence of thrombosis in children with and without abnormal tests of thrombophilia. We performed a prospective, population-based, case-control study including patients with venous thrombosis (VT, n=43) and their controls (n=136) from a cohort of 972 consecutive children with either VT or arterial thrombosis (AT, n=26) and their controls (n=21). The prevalence of history of venous thromboembol
