New in-game feature: Optimal Stadium With Optimal Stadium, you can now generate your perfect stadium in FIFA Ultimate Team, even before you begin the creation of your Ultimate Team. Using the exact dimensions and location of stadiums in MLS, Bundesliga and La Liga, this highly-detailed feature takes you through the entire creation process, from the design of the pitch to the construction of stands. New in-game feature: Triangulation How we score goals has changed in the past few years. Now you can see the movement of every player on the pitch with Triangulation, added to FIFA Ultimate Team in FIFA 22. With this function, which is included in FIFA Ultimate Team, you can track individual player runs across the pitch, make sure that your most potent attackers are positioned in the right spot to take advantage of the space that appears before them, and see how each of your opponents will attack you during any given game, even at the end of a match.

New in-game feature: Blanket Crouch

Blanket Crouch enables players to control a defender's movement by passing to a dummy player. FIFA 22 also expands on the existing targeting system, where players can pass to each other on the pitch at any time during play, including while an opponent is receiving the ball.

New in-game feature: Second Target Control

Second Target Control enables players to control a defender's movement by passing to a dummy player, who then passes back to the original player. This function will appear in FIFA 22, where player control is varied to reward those who make the smart, strategic pass, or to allow attacking players the opportunity to break the game open with one of the passing options available to them. New in-game feature: A new way of thinking about playing defense As FIFA 17 launched, we introduced a new, unique defensive AI system – AI Retention – which allowed players to control a defender’s movement by passing to a dummy player, who then passes back to the original player. In FIFA 18, this system was expanded even further to become AI Retention 2.0, where a defender’s movement is controlled by a dummy player who passes the ball to a secondary defender, who then passes it back to the original defender. In FIFA 22, we’ve now introduced a new system, AI Retention 2.5, which works in a similar way, but with even
