Experience the thrill of a high-octane XXX racer with the only game designed specifically for the female gamer. The 12 original audio tracks are carefully engineered to immerse you in the intense, visceral ride. The soundtrack is not an audiobook where you read the lyrics over the radio. The game is designed as a full-scale interactive multimedia experience with voice-over narration, intense graphics, a high-quality soundtrack and on-screen lyrics to boot. "Bring your audiobooks to a new level of interactivity with FXZeal" is more than just a tagline - FXZeal is a brand new way to experience the written word. "a breath of fresh air to the oversexed XXXXXXXX games" ~ NowGamer.com "FXZeal makes XXXXXXXX a totally new experience for the female gamer." ~ IGN.com FXZeal is the first female-oriented XXXXXXXX type

Part two: Warzone Commander is an ambitious project that aims to re-create World War 2 in historical detail. To achieve this, the team is now developing a standalone WW2 FPS. Warzone Commander is their attempt at creating a do-it-yourself version of their ambitious vision, while not taking away any of the main aspects the original game offers. This video provides a good step-

Forum rules The Argekon forum can be used for various non-competitive gaming topics. It does not hold any sort of record, awards or rank of the player. If you don't know the game then what are you doing here? If you don't want to be part of the community - Please exit immediately. Discussion on the forum for An Interesting Journey of Mr. PAF is very much welcome! If you have any questions regarding the game, please feel free to join the Argekon chatroom, the game's website or contact the development team. So here we go again. I will be recording the scores from the An Interesting Journey of Mr. PAF indie challenge that I'm playing with friends. I'll also be posting all the progress in the next few days. Scoring will be done in the following manner: Round Point After round 1 +25 to 100 2 +20 to 200 3 +15 to 300 4 +10 to 400 5 +5 to 500 6 to 1000 8 No point 9 -5 to 100 10 -10 to 200 11 -15 to 300 12 -20 to 400 13 -25 to 500 14 -30 to 1000 The rule I'll use is this: the player that gets to 100 wins, even if someone else got to 50. The score for a win is as follows: Points : 35 So, you can calculate in yourself how much time you need to reach another round in order to score some points. Well, like I said this is the first part of a large project I'll be doing here. If you want to see some other achievement you can find my last one here: The future of this challenge is very uncertain, as I have no one to play with and I will be keeping it for a long time, therefore, it is possible that this challenge will never be completed. Having said that, I have been thinking about recording the review Not content with sticking with the more established block buster franchises, the last decade has brought us a handful of indie titles that have been snapped up by major developers for the XBLA system and the Playstation Network. This has given countless gamers the opportunity to revisit their favourite bits and pieces of gaming history, but it hasn't always been smooth sailing. Since the arrival of these titles on the market, many developers have tried to walk the tightrope of preserving the retro experiences whilst also improving upon them to achieve the best results. Every now and then a title comes along that is in a completely different mould. To others it's a tribute to the development of modern-day gaming. I believe RCR DX is one of those rare titles. Retro City Rampage, in its own right, is already a hit thanks to the Wii's Virtual Console service. The game still feels as fresh and appealing as ever, thanks to the surprisingly rich and varied collection of enemies to fight, the daring and hilarious puns to be made as you progress, and the perfect use of WYSIWYG music scores to compliment any mayhem. There are a few excellences that unite these games and they are all showcased within the superb soundtrack. As you amble through the game's challenging levels, well intentioned but poorly executed songs will play. Each one is unique and reflects the general theme of the level as it plays. The best parts of the music are the improvised moments at the end of each stage that augment the chaos with an extra layer of humour. The death screen is a microcosm of the theme of the level, it's a desolate cityscape where death awaits. This doesn't mean you're playing through the game on easy mode though, the button prompts are annoying but they are also the explanation as to why random characters are running around the game world. The majority of the time the prompts seem to be asking the player to "WALK" or "RUN" as a hint to help the player find the right button key to hit to complete the level. These prompts are not present when you complete a level, so it's possible to go through and complete them for all of the game's heroes. This is a good thing because it slowly unlocks more mayhem-inducing levels. Once the game switches into "TWO - PLAYER" mode
