Before using EverMap, make sure that you have the latest version of Adobe Acrobat installed. Get it from nuclear magnetic resonance relaxometry of injectable composites. Proton relaxation rates of chitin, glycogen and carboxymethylcellulose were measured in water, phosphate buffer, buffer containing 4% methylene iodide, and 4% methylene iodide containing phosphate buffer. The results were compared with those of a reference compound (T1) and with T1 values observed in routine bone scintigraphy. The results show that T1 of water, free water, and T1 of free water containing 1.6% NaCl had the same value for all compounds, whereas T1 of water containing 4% methylene iodide had a value different for all compounds. The T1 values of the injectable composites were within 7% of the T1 of the reference compound in water for all compounds tested. Pages 1.19.2012

Well, time finally flew by! I got so many things done during the holidays, I hardly had time to think about anything else. Aint nobody got time for that, I ain't nobody! (other than my parents, I might add....I say this with great love for all of you....) I woke up this morning to the beautiful sight of what I love to call the "real world". We were treated to our first snow of the season. I was pretty excited by the prospect of such a beautiful display of nature's beauty. Then something happened, I opened the door to come
