I looked up the word in O.P.E.D but it doesn't seem to be that common a word. If you know the word and how to explain it to me, I would really appreciate it. A: In English the distinction between "unilateral" and "mutual" is expressed by an article. His bilateral marbles are his only defence. But in your example the article refers to the "side" or "one-sided" as opposed to "both sides" or "both" the "unilateral" (side) idea. *He is a unitarian. *His theory is a monolatric one. *His interests are monolatric. The words are different from "monocentric" (or "monocentric", I can't remember which). The latter is a difficult but very common word, especially for anything related to astronomy. It's use is likely to be misunderstood by the average speaker. // Copyright 2014 The Chromium Authors. All rights reserved. // Use of
